Harmonic Energy, Inc. is Nevada corporation, formed May 1, 2007. It is currently developing a new business which will provide a comprehensive solution for the disposition and recycling of scrap tires through tire re-manufacturing and carbonization of scrap tire components. Tire re-manufacturing is a process that takes high quality used tires, removes the old tread and sidewall markings, and then applies new rubber to the tread and sidewall. The used casing along with the new rubber is vulcanized under high pressure and heat to produce a new tire. This is the same process used by new tire manufacturers except that they make the casing (the most costly part of the tire). Carbonization is a technology that heats tires in an oxygen free environment and turns spent tire casings into diesel fuel, carbon black, steel, and syn-gas.
