D. Competitive business conditions, the issuer's competitive position in the industry, and methods of competition.

Widely used communication tools such as Google Hangouts, Facebook chat, Yahoo Messenger, Snapchat, WhatsApp, Viber, AIM, BlackBerry Messenger and many others do not offer end to end encryption which makes communications through them susceptible to surveillance on the provider's side. South African mobile social network Mxit and widely used Chinese instant messaging service QQ don't provide encryption at all, making them the least secure products of the 39 that were tested.

Many potential competitors and some non-competitors advertise some form of 'end-to-end encryption' for users' data. However, 'end-to-end encryption' is rapidly becoming the most useless term in the security lexicon because, rather than encrypting, the real challenge is in distributing users' encryption keys securely, i.e., without relying on a trusted, central service. The problem here is simple: if someone can compromise such a service, then that person can convince a device to use its encryption key instead of the key of intended recipients. In this scenario -- known as a "Man in the Middle" (MITM) attack -- all the encryption in the world won't help.

Silent Circle consists of multiple apps, supporting VoIP and IM -- with an optional Snapchat-like self-destructing messages feature. The apps can essentially replace the standard phone and message apps on an iPhone or Android device. Silent Circle is a paid subscription service which is marketed to both individual consumers and businesses. Silent Circle prices its non-institutional consumer app between $9.95 and $39.95 per month based upon tiered usage levels. The consumer functions are focused on a Member-to-Member private communications service that includes Silent Phone & Silent Text for voice, video, text and file transfer on mobile devices. Silent Circle uses ZRTP (and a variant called SCIMP) to generate the keys used in communications. It doesn't require the user to trust a central directory server, or to send keys outside of the device. Protection against MITM comes from two features: (1) the app presents a 'short authentication string' which users can verbally compare before they communicate, and (2) after a user has successfully communicated the first time, it caches a 'secret' which can be used to protect future sessions.

The following is a brief synopsis with respect to a few other secure messaging applications on the market:

Open Whisper Systems is an open source non-commercial enterprise offering a free app for Android devices with encrypted voice (RedPhone) and text (TextSecure) applications. Red Phone uses ZRTP to establish keys and then encrypts voice data using AES. Red Phone uses a short authentication string to prevent MITM attacks. Red Phone uses only ZRTP, not SCIMP.

ChatSecure + Orbot: ChatSecure is an encrypted messenger app built for iPhone and Android devices. It is a free and open source app that features OTR encryption over XMPP.

Cryptocat is an encrypted chatting app. Cryptocat is a free open chat app that aims to provide an open source accessible messaging environment with a transparent layer of encryption. Cryptocat uses the Off the Record Messaging (OTR) protocol to encrypt its messages.

WHAM INC.'s CypherSecure mobile encryption app is an open source multi-functional mobile encryption communications app integrated into one system for both Android and iOS systems that can compete head to head with any other application currently in today's consumer market place.

The Market for Mobile Security

Mobile security will be a higher priority for consumers from 2017 onward. Most consumers do not recognize that antivirus is important on mobile devices and therefore have not yet established a consistent practice of buying mobile device endpoint protection software. This purchasing trend and market shift away from PCs will have significant repercussions on the consumer security market. However, as mobile devices gain in mass popularity and as security is likely to be a higher priority from 2017 onward, then new market opportunities are likely to emerge.

By 2018, more than half of organizations will use security services firms that specialize in data protection, security risk management and security infrastructure management to enhance their security postures. Many organizations continue to lack the appropriate skills necessary to define, implement and operate appropriate levels of data protection and privacy-specific security controls. This lack of skills leads organizations to contract security consulting firms that specialize in data protection and security risk management to address regulatory compliance demands and enhance their security postures. A significant portion of organizations are shifting existing resources away from the operational aspects of security technologies, such as security device administration and monitoring, toward mitigation and incident response. This new dynamic has given rise to significant growth throughout the globe for managed security services.

Gartner's latest forecast for information security is available in the report 'Forecast: Information Security, Worldwide, available on Gartner's web site at: www.gartner.com/doc/2815822 and more detail on the trends behind the forecast can be found in the report 'Forecast Overview: Information Security, Worldwide, 2014 Update', available at www.gartner.com/doc/2780717.

Mobile Security Market 2016-2020: Global Industry Growth, Analysis and Report Forecast

Advancement in the mobile device (smartphone, tablet and laptops) market have been occurring at a rapid pace–whether in storage, performance, application, capability or internet connectivity. However, there is a fundamental area where broad advancements have not been realized on mobile devices as compared to computers. Mobile security has always been one of the key elements within the mobile devices such as smartphones, tablets and laptops. As mobile device usage increases, particularly in smartphones and tablets, there is a better security and integrity need.

Mobile security software solutions are rapidly gaining importance and are estimated to grow in the years to come. The enterprises allowing their employees to bring their mobile devices in the arena would face security challenges to protect their corporate data. Different financial institutions, government agencies and other small and medium-sized businesses (SMB) are adopting "bring-your-own-device" (BYOD) policies thus demand more secured solutions in order to protect their corporate data without hampering personal data of the employee. To minimize the malware, data loss and other security breach effects, companies are on the verge to produce mobile security software solutions that would meet requirements of different enterprises. Over the time various security software and hardware solutions have been developed by the companies such as authentication security, mobile application management, containerization software and many more. Adoption of BYOD policy in an organization makes employees more productive. The employees access to the corporate network and data has made organizations to invest further in the development of custom applications.

See Report On Mobile Security Market: http://www.marketresearchstore.com/report/global-mobile-security-market-49155#SampleRequest.

The BYOD policy and VPN protection are acting as major driving forces for the market growth. Product launches and enhancements are the key strategies adopted by the market players to enhance their market share. For instance, Kaspersky has introduced new virtualization 2.0 security solution to provide advanced protection to VMware, Microsoft virtualization platforms. Intel has introduced Intel® Data Protection Technology for securing end-to-end transactions of the customers.

On the basis of solutions, global mobile security market is segmented into authentication, mobile application management and mobile data protection. The mobile application management trend is likely to increase as more applications would be developed by the developers. Some of the prime reasons for the development of application security solutions would be the increase in dependence on applications and the frequency and length of usage.

On the basis of security types, the mobile security market is segmented into integrated-mail and anti-virus. The various operating systems driving the mobile security market includes iOS, Android, Microsoft, Blackberry and Others. Android is the fastest adopting OS in the mobile device market with thousands of devices activated per day. To expand the market share, Apple has introduced iOS version of the operating system which approves the applications on the Apple App Store.

Small and Medium Businesses (SMBs) adopt the BYOD policy which demands varied security software to protect the corporate data in different enterprises such as financial institutions, retail, education, manufacturing and automotive, healthcare and others. Financial institutions such as banks dominate the enterprise security usage followed by healthcare and government agencies.

Geographically, the market is segmented into North America, Europe, Asia Pacific and LAMEA. In the years to come, Asia-Pacific should be a prominent mobile security market, owing to the rapidly growing population and increasing IT hubs. This would indirectly boost the market for mobile security market in the Asia-Pacific region.

History of Vogt Masonry Inc.
VMI is owned by WHAM INC. and is operated by Zach Vogt, as the Chief Executive Officer who is a third generation mason contractor. Mr. Vogt's mother, Madonna Piazza, was the oldest of thirteen children who were all born in Lockport, Illinois. Mr. Vogt's uncle, Jack McCarthy and his brother-in-law, Dick Cronholm, started B&B Masonry, which was named after both of their wives. They were in business for over 50 years and all of Mr. Vogt's uncles, six in total, either laid brick or labored for B&B Masonry, as they were coming out of high school. Uncle Chris Piazza created a business in the mid-1980s formed as Piazza Masonry Inc., and became known as one of the most successful masonry companies in the region which employed up to 200 employees, with annual revenues up to $15,000,000-$16,000,000. Piazza Masonry Inc. built for all the major general contractors throughout the Chicagoland area such as Walsh, Bovis, Power, Turner, Henry Bros., Kewit and others. Eventually Mr. Vogt's uncle, Chris Piazza, gave him the same opportunity that was afforded to him while he was in high school, which Mr. Vogt accepted. Piazza Masonry Inc. stayed strong through a tough economy for 27 years in business before dissolution. Mr. Vogt's uncle, Sean Piazza, then started Piazza and Mannerino Masonry Inc. in 2012, which generates approximately $4,000,000-$5,000,000 per year throughout the Chicagoland area. Mr. Vogt learned his craftsmanship/trade by doing all facets of masonry work for both of his uncles for over 15 years. Through the guidance and counsel from his Uncle Chris Piazza, Mr. Vogt successfully launched Vogt Masonry Inc. in 2015, which specializes in masonry and demolition work. In the past year, VMI has grown, strengthened and established its business relationships, as well as received and learned invaluable insights into the construction industry. In the recent year, VMI has generated approximately $750,000 in contracts. The new relationship between WHAM INC. and VMI, creates a perfect combination of opportunity and organic growth, allowing for the freedom to rebuild a name and legacy, which started over 65 years ago, by honoring the Lord and operating in a manner consistent with biblical principles.
