Efuel EFN, Corporation
1212 South Main Street
Wildwood, Florida 34785

email: efuelefn@yahoo.com
phone: (352) 326-8381
website: www.efuelefncorporation.com

eFUEL EFN, CORP.
1212 S. Main St. Wildwood, Fl 34748 USA
Ph: 352-399-6278

THE 3rd QUARTERLY INCOME INCREASE UP 350% AND POTENTIAL NEW PURCHASE TO THE eFUEL EFN CORPORATION

Press Release, Wildwood Florida Nov. 15, 2016. This correspondence is to deliver great news to the public and to explain shareholders a general idea, interest and opportunity in future company activity.

In the spite of today's dissipation world economy eFUEL EFN, CORP. has great potential to expand its position in domestic and international market. This company has long-term growing objectives and great potential to obtain an IMPORT- EXPORT license, to import products for our businesses, expand operation and make money. Investor should invest in the eFUEL EFN, Corp. with simple strategies buying stock from the market. The stock symbol is "EFLN" and is listed on OTC Pink Sheet.

Investor should retain position at "EFLN" as long-term investment objectives. The "EFLN" will growth in your broker account and accumulate your buying strength on market.

The Company business plan is developed in five divisions that represents investment-holding corporation with name eFUEL EFN Corp. with trading symbol "EFLN". The corporation has intangible, tangible assets and no large debt. The corporation is existing as an asset holding entity with goals to purchase, expand and integrate acquiring business into our existing business structure. In 3rd quarter of 2016 company "EFLN" negotiate to purchase additional assets, with value of $1,250.000.00, and income of $250,000.00 this assets should be added to "EFLN" in 4th quarter 2016 . In addition, the company negotiating purchasing mineral assets to be valued of $500,000,000.00 , this portfolio of land and minerals will be in 2017 on balance sheet. The company has third quarter 2016 net income increase of 350% . The new website is: WWW.EFUELEFN.COM. Alternatively, WWW.EFUELEFNCOPORATION.COM, it will explain our basic mission. The management is working to upgrade company regulatory readings and to electronically trade on international market.

In today times stock market curve fluctuate up and down. The management does not have control of it. The investor has to know company goals, determination and positive character of the company owners and its management's personnel, investor should not worry about stock going up and down. We encourage you to invest in eFUEL EFN CORP. and build company. Together with constructive work and good planning, we will make progress. This is my inspiration and basic description of the company that is in a growing position, has great development structure, and has great potential for prosperity in the future that will create and extend rewards to the shareholders. In this stage of business, we have creational spirit, knowledge and wisdom to continue operation in this difficult economic environment.

The company "EFLN" has great potential to benefit from recent election of Republican president. The proposed economic changes of the President - elect Donald J. Trump encourage investments and creation of wealth, which is beneficial to our company and shareholders.

The eFUEL EFN CORPORATION employs Mr. Slavoljub Stefanovic to perform duty as a Chief Financial Officer. Mr. Stefanovic has managed over a billion dollar fund with EURO AMERICAN FINANCE NETWORK INC. He has the ability to improve eFUEL EFN CORPORATION financial goals.

The information is to present company to investors to analyze the company, and to take into consideration on investment in a great company that we are building.

This press release has information that contains certain forward looking statement with the meaning of Section 27A of securities Act 1933 as amended and Section 21E of the Securities Exchange Act 1954, both which are intended to be covered by the safe harbors created in connection ,with that investor are cautioned that all Forwarding statements involve risks and uncertainties including eFUEL EFN CORPORATION.

Thank you,
Ljubica Stefanovic, President.
EFUEL EFN, Corp.
Ph. 352-504-1300, efuelefn@yahoo.com

Subject: Thank you

From: Donald J. Trump (contact@email.donaldtrump.com)

To: slavostefanovic@yahoo.com;

Date: Thursday, November 10, 2016 11:34 AM

TRUMP
PENCE
MAKE AMERICA GREAT AGAIN!

Slavoljub,

They said we could never do it.

But Tuesday night you showed the world that America will once again be a country of, for, and by the PEOPLE.

You fought like a winner, you defied all odds, and history will forever remember the role you played in taking our country back.

I never could've done it without you, Slavoljub.

Tuesday night we learned that America is still a beacon of hope where the impossible is possible.

For far too long, we've heard Washington politicians give the excuse that "it can't be done." They say we can't balance the budget, we can't stop corruption, we can't control the border, we can't bring jobs back to our country.

I REFUSE to accept that it can't be done. This is the country that declared its independence, won two world wars, and landed a man on the moon. This is America. We can and we WILL get it done.

Now it's time to start uniting our country and binding the wounds of our divided nation. I promise to be a president for ALL Americans. I will work for you. I will fight for you. And I will win for you.

You will soon remember what it's like to win as an American.

Thank you and God bless you,

Donald J. Trump

CONTRIBUTE NOW

CHASE J.P.Morgan

Markets and Economy

What to Expect From a Trump Administration

How might President-elect Donald Trump's policies impact the future of the US economy?

Jim Glassman, Head Economist, Commercial Banking
November 10, 2016

Donald Trump's surprise victory has upended expectations for American economic policy. Backed by a narrow majority in Congress, we can likely expect action on a number of conservative priorities, from tax reform and immigration to energy and trade. From time to time, Trump's campaign may have come under fire for its divisive rhetoric, but his appeal has always been rooted in his promise to promote industrial output and spur economic growth. In office, his economic policies are likely to prioritize industry-friendly reforms.

November's presidential election also saw Republicans maintain their majority in the Senate, as well as their significant margin in the House, which will likely ease the gridlock that has prevented significant policy shifts from taking root in recent years. However, divisions within the party could limit legislative action to the areas where Trump's populism overlaps with Congress's conventional conservatism.

Overall, here's how a Trump administration might impact the following key economic areas:

Taxes

Tax reform has long been a priority for congressional Republicans, and Trump's tax plan closely mirrors traditional conservative proposals. We can expect the administration to push for lower corporate taxes, reduced income taxes and a one-off tax "holiday" that allows for the repatriation of foreign income at a discounted rate. Falling income taxes could make a modest contribution to economic growth, and reduced taxes on capital gains will likely encourage investment.

Regulation

The Republican Party has always been reflexively anti-regulation. Trump's appointees are likely to relax industry-specific rules, and Congress may attempt to roll back elements of the Dodd-Frank financial regulations. This could remove some friction and compliance costs from financial transactions, marginally encouraging capital investment.

Energy

Trump has been a reliable supporter of hydrocarbons. America's coal industry may get a temporary lifeline if environmental regulations are suspended and older plants are allowed to remain in operation without expensive retrofits. Oil and gas producers can likely look forward to less stringent environmental regulations, quicker approval for new pipelines and a more favorable permitting process for exploration on public lands.

However, the impact of these measures could be underwhelming: rising natural gas production will likely continue to erode coal's price advantage, and the global oil glut has already made drilling in most American shale fields unprofitable at current prices. Funding for clean energy research may be cut, but cutting existing subsidies for wind farms could be a political risk for a politician who has promised to bring jobs to rural areas.

Trade

Antagonism toward free trade treaties has been a hallmark of Trump's campaign, and it's likely that his administration will be more aggressive in prosecuting treaty violations, as well as in taking a protectionist stance against new trade deals, including the Trans-Pacific Partnership.

However, a trade-friendly Congress is unlikely to endorse Trump's more extreme campaign promises, such as "ripping up NAFTA." Exiting long-standing free trade treaties will likely prove politically difficult, since many American factories depend on the free flow of goods. For example, if an auto manufacturer is forced to shutter its new US plant because it can no longer take advantage of low-cost components produced in Mexico, Trump's base would see the move as a betrayal of his promise to help American industry.

Immigration

Tightening immigration flows could limit an important avenue for growth. The American workforce is growing more slowly than in previous generations, and importing new workers is a straightforward way to offset demographic decline. Mass deportations would threaten to remove 11 million undocumented workers who are currently earning, spending and paying taxes in America.

Healthcare

The Trump administration will have an opportunity to make fundamental reforms to the American healthcare system and possibly head off a looming fiscal crisis. (/pages/commercial-banking/executive-connect/entitlement-crisis) He will likely have strong congressional support for repealing the Affordable Care Act, but the administration will be challenged to replace the ACA with a policy that restrains the spiraling growth of healthcare costs. Fortunately, House Speaker Paul Ryan is one of the few leaders advocating serious entitlement reform. A breakthrough on this front would likely remove a tremendous burden from America's economic future.

Looking Toward the Future

Donald Trump's election upset—and the surprising ability of the Republicans to maintain control of the Senate—sets the stage for a fundamentally different direction for economic policy. Given the divisions within the Republican Party, as well as a still-divided nation, it will likely take some time to sort out all of the many implications of the outcome. Nonetheless, because economic issues were so central to Trump's election success, the energy of a Trump administration will likely lead to pro-growth initiatives that the market eventually could see as bullish.

View our economic commentary disclaimer (/pages/commercial-banking/executive-connect/glassman-disclaimer).

Copyright © 2016 JPMorgan Chase & Co. All rights reserved.