Restricted securities are securities acquired in an unregistered private sale from the company or from an affiliate of such an issuer.

Control securities are those held by an affiliate of the issuing company. An affiliate is a person such as a director or large shareholder in the relationship of control of or with the issuer. Control means the power to direct the management and policies of the company in question, whether through the ownership of voting securities, by contract, or otherwise. If an investor purchases securities from a controlling person or "affiliate," he or she takes restricted securities, even if they were not restricted in the affiliate's hands. All stock acquired by an affiliate in the open market becomes subject to Rule 144 as "control securities."

relationship with Simon Yu and these shares vest over up to a two-year period, but are considered to be issued and outstanding as of their grant date.

See discussion of Rule 144 contained hereinbelow.

- G. The certificates or other documents that evidence the securities contain a legend (1) stating that the securities have not been registered under the Securities Act of 1933, as amended ("Securities Act"), and (2) setting forth or referring to the restrictions on transferability and sale of the shares under the Securities Act.

The shares of Common Stock issued under the Share Exchange Agreement, as indicated in A above for the acquisition of Nano Tech West, Inc were not registered under the Securities Act, and had restrictive legends imposed that reflect this status. The shares of Common Stock were issued in a private placement in reliance on the exemption from registration provided by Section 4(a)(2) of the Securities Act. The transaction has been rescinded.

The sale and issuance of the shares of the Common Stock upon the exercise of a Convertible Note was exempt from registration under the Securities Act by virtue of Section 4(a)(2) as a transaction not involving a public offering. Blue and Gold LLC had acquired the convertible promissory note and the shares of Common Stock on conversion of the note for investment purposes only and not with a view to the distribution to the public of the securities.

H. Evergreen Rule.

Rule 144(i) of Rule 144 states that Rule 144 is not available for the resale of securities initially issued by a former shell company until one year after the issuer has filed current "Form 10" information (the information that would be required if the company were a reporting company and filing a general form for registration of securities on Form 10 under the Exchange Act with the SEC reflecting its status as an entity that is no longer a shell company; and unless the issuer of shares is current on all reports and other materials required to be filed with the SEC during the 12 months prior. - C. The holders of shares of Series A Convertible Preferred Stock have no dividend rights except as may be declared by the Board in its sole and absolute discretion, out of funds legally available for that purpose.

J. Rule 144.

Non-affiliates reselling restricted securities, as well as affiliates selling restricted or non-restricted securities, are not considered to be engaged in a distribution and, therefore, are not deemed underwriters as defined in Section 2(a)(11), if Rule 144 applies and the six conditions are met:

1. Holding Periods. Before an investor may sell restricted securities of a non-reporting issuer, the investor must hold them for at least one year. The holding period only applies to restricted securities. Because securities acquired the public market are not restricted, there is no holding period for an affiliate who purchases securities of the issuer in the marketplace.⁵

The six-month holding period for reporting shells is subject to being lengthened until after the shell ceases to be a shell to one year.

After a one year holding period, a non-affiliate investor may have unlimited re-sales under Rule 144 and need not comply with any other Rule 144 requirements.

Additional securities purchased from the issuer do not affect the holding period of previously purchased securities of the same class. If an investor purchased restricted securities from another non-affiliate, he or she can tack on that non-affiliate's holding period to his or her holding period. If an investor acquires restricted securities from an affiliate, a new holding period commences. Rule 144(d)(ii) permits "tacking" of the holding period. If stock is acquired from the issuer in conversion of a convertible note, the newly acquired stock shall be deemed to be acquired at the same time as the convertible note was issued.

An affiliate's resale is subject to the other conditions of the rule. After the one year holding period, an investor may resell the securities in accordance with all Rule 144 requirements including (i) current public information, (ii) volume limitations, (iii) manner of sale requirements for equity securities, and (iv) filing notice with the SEC.

2. Adequate Current Information. Except for a non-affiliate of non-reporting issuers, there must be adequate current information about the reporting issuer of the securities before the sale can be made. For non-reporting companies, this means that certain company information, including information regarding the nature of its business, the identity of its officers and directors, and its financial statements, is publicly available. For a non-reporting issuer, after the one year holding period, an investor need not comply with any other Rule 144 requirements, including any requirements relating to adequate current information. Rule 144(c) codifies what constitutes current public information.⁶

3. Trading Volume Formula. After the applicable holding period, the number of shares an affiliate may sell during any three-month period cannot exceed the greater of 1% of the outstanding shares of the same class being sold, or if the class is listed on a stock exchange or quoted on Nasdaq, the greater of 1% or the average reported weekly trading volume during the four weeks preceding the filing a notice of the sale on Form 144. Over-the-counter stocks, including those quoted on the OTC Bulletin Board and the Pink Sheets, can only be sold using 1% measurement. [Rule 144(e) has an alternative volume limit of up to 10% of debt securities that may apply to convertible notes.]

4. Ordinary Brokerage Transactions. The sales must be handled in all respects as routine trading transactions, and brokers may not receive more than a normal commission. Neither the seller nor the broker can solicit orders to buy the securities. Rule 144(f) codifies the requirements as it relates to the manner of sale.

⁶ Adequate current information generally means that the companies have complied with the periodic reporting requirements of the Exchange Act.

5. Filing Notice with the SEC. At the time as an affiliate places his or her order, the affiliate must file a notice with the SEC on Form 144 if the sale involves more than 5,000 shares or the aggregate dollar amount is greater than $50,000 in any three-month period. The sale must take place within three months of filing the notice and, if the securities have not been sold, the proposed seller must file an amended notice.
