6) Describe the Issuer’s Business, Products and Services

Describe the issuer’s business so a potential investor can clearly understand the company. In answering this item, please include the following:

- A. a description of the issuer’s business operations;

Permanent Technologies Inc. (“Permanent Technologies,” the “Company,” “we” or “us”) is a publicly traded company, with domestic and international patents for a unique and innovative fastener system called TineLok. This is a vibration proof fastening system that will become the industry standard for quality and integrity. Currently, the industry addresses the vibration issue with vibration “resistant” techniques such as certain adhesives and friction components between internal and external threads. The TineLok system consists of three or more channels parallel to the center axis of the externally threaded bolt and an internally threaded nut with three or more tines positioned above the threads of the nut. The tines are positioned to allow the assembler positive locking at a variety of torques to meet the manufacturers design requirements. There are many benefits to this technology including, but not limited to:

- Lower warranty costs due to superior reliability; greatly improve safety factors
- Prevent joint failure in hard to service locations
- Self-locking mechanism easily viewed during routine maintenance or inspection
- Easily installed, tightened or removed
- Discourage tampering with warranty parts or theft of valuable components

The U.S. Navy has tested the TineLok fastener system on its LCAC hovercraft for overall integrity and torque. These machines endure extreme vibration, particularly in the area around the rubber skirts. After 18 months of testing the stainless steel version of the TineLok fastener has been specified for the replacement with a new skirt design on the refurbishment program for the 80 LCAC Hovercrafts.

This unique product has been a long time coming in this industry space and management expect to promote this new industry standard globally. Permanent Technologies has taken necessary steps to assure patent protection of its cutting edge technology internationally and as such anticipates little competition in the locking fastener arena.

Overview

Permanent Technologies is the inventor and manufacturer of the TineLok Fastening System, a family of fasteners that are designed to hold tight in the most demanding, extreme and harshest conditions, environments and applications. Our website is www.TineLok.com.

The TineLok Fastening System's vibration-proof, self-locking technology is an affordable alternative to traditional fasteners when increased safety, reliability, operating life and reduced maintenance is desired or required.

The Company has been granted patents both in the U.S., EU, and China for the TineLok technology.

Market

The industry for industrial fasteners is very large, comprising over 200 billion units sold annually in the United States alone, representing an $8.8 billion market. When considering the International market, this equates to over $40 Billion and over 1,500 fastener manufacturing and distribution companies.
