-----Targeted Service Area and Client Base-----

Hall of Fame Beverages, Inc. will market to 18-34 year olds as they have a high brand name recall percentage. Our target market is the young hip business executive. The company will create a product that is perfect for every drinking opportunity-either in a new hip cocktail or just sipped down. At events our product will be the one asked for in all social settings. Our marketing plan will utilize gorilla-marketing tactics by using street teams and strategic alliances with urban marketing companies. We plan on marketing by sponsoring at special events, radio station events, movie premiers, etc. We also plan to market at the hippest clubs and restaurants in Los Angeles. We will concentrate on Los Angeles and Southern California initially and eventually expand our branding across the United States.

-----Services Pricing Strategy-----

Our pricing strategy is set up in such a way that makes us extremely competitive within the market. Sales are reflected at a price point of $24.00 per case for the energy drink. Costs of goods sold are based on manufacturing a case at $7.48 of Atomic Dogg Energy Drink®, a case contains 24 -16oz. With the expertise and contacts we have made in the industry, sales projections are realistic and attainable. Our pricing is competitive, although it is our experience that pricing overall has a minimal affect on the customer's decision to purchase, it is mostly taste and kick. We will offer Net 30 day terms to credit worthy distributors as a competitive edge.

MARKET

-----Market Analysis Summary-----

Current demand in target market, energy drinks can be marketed to consumers who are part of the Urban/MTV/ Hip Hop culture. The best way to define and review the Urban/MTV market is to look to the demographic market that is so well controlled by the MTV channel as follows: MTV reaches 363 million households worldwide, and is the number one Media Brand in the world. MTV consumers are passionate about topics ranging from fashion, lifestyle and sports to attitude, politics and creativity; all through the prism of music. MTV states that they own the young adult demographic. Young adults 12 - 34's are 95 million strong and growing, representing 32% of the population. Our Niche will be the unique way we market our product and our customer base we are targeting. Our promotion intends to utilize gorilla marketing, street teams and strategic alliances within the urban marketing companies we currently have relationships with. Additionally we have a full complement of point of sales items already developed, the logo is developed and all logos and labels are trademarked.

-----Competitive Comparison-----

This company will be geared toward creating an entire industry that will include marketing, distribution, and manufacturing thereby creating jobs for many in the communities in which it is based. Management's prior beverage and business experience is what leads the competition. Successful start- up companies have to be able to control expenses and provide superior quality. The management team at Hall of Fame Beverages, Inc is poised to accomplish just that.

Our largest product competitors are Red Bull, Monster, Rock Star, and Full Throttle. We are not trying to take over their market share as they are well-established brands; however we intend to penetrate a portion with our products. We want to successfully brand our product and therefore increase our market share. We believe that our products will be able to compete due to several factors. We use the highest quality ingredients in our product formula. Pricing will be competitive. We will target and develop an urban niche, which has been mostly, disregarded by the major labels. As a matter of fact, the few majors that have attempted to penetrate the urban niche have been for the most part unsuccessful. We intend to concentrate our efforts and develop the niche market to the fullest.

-----Target Market Segment Strategy-----

Current demand in the target market for energy drinks can be marketed to consumers who are part of the Urban/MTV/ Hip Hop culture. The best way to define and review the Urban/MTV market is to look to the demographic market that is so well controlled by the MTV channel as follows: MTV reaches 363 million households worldwide, and is the number one Media Brand in the world. MTV states that they own the young adult demographic. Young adults 12 - 34's are 95 million strong and growing, representing 32% of the population. The MTV audience wields over $250 billion dollars in buying power. The MTV audience is more likely to reside in homes with a household income in excess of $75,000.

By the year 2010, young adult spending power is projected to be $350 billion. MTV's audience is deciding what they want. Their median age represents when a majority of young Americans become loyal to brands they are most likely to use for the rest of their lives. Now is the time to influence their choices. In fact, 69% of these consumers make their purchasing decisions based on brand name, not price.

Market Research indicates that Energy Drinks appeal disproportionately to the Hispanic and black adult consumer, with consumption of energy drinks among black and Hispanic adults at 16% and 22%, respectively, compared to 9% of white adults. Conversely, energy drink consumption among black and Hispanic teens is slightly lower than white teens (17% vs. 18%).

Energy Drinks are particularly appealing to the youth-oriented segment of the consumer population often termed the Urban, MTV, or Hip Hop generation. Although the energy drink niche is a small share of the soft drink market, it shows excellent growth potential. The energy drink category is small, dynamic and growing. The energy drink sector continues to grow and is expected to continue growing.

-----Market Need-----

Our marketing plan is designed to focus on the consumer. We have performed extensive market research on the energy drink industry and understand the needs of our consumer and the importance of delivering the highest quality products and services to them. Although the energy drink niche is a small share of the soft drink market, it shows excellent growth potential. The energy drink category is dynamic and growing. The energy drink sector continues to grow and is expected to continue growing. Hall of Fame Beverages, Inc. intends to take full advantage of this growth with a well-executed marketing plan. The Company understands that it has to execute our marketing plan with excellence in order to compete.

-----Market Trend-----

Energy Drink:

Current facts about the energy drink industry are: The young energy drink market has grown significantly in the past five years. From 1998-2003 sales have increased an estimated 465%.

Even with that growth, energy drinks are expected to remain a niche category at 2% of the larger $60 billion generated by the carbonated soft drink industry. Currently, three major manufacturers dominate the energy drink category: Red Bull, Hansen and Rock Star, which collectively hold approximately 80% of the market share.

When it comes to spending, the age 12-34 demographic wields a significant amount of influence. In total, people age 12-34 accounted for 41% of all retail shopping dollars spent last year. In fact, this consumer group spent more money shopping than did those over 35 years of age.

EXPANSION

Hall of Fame Beverages will aggressively sell and service our products to a new and larger client base, which the Company believes will create substantial revenues and profits for Hall of Fame Beverages, Inc.

Additionally, Hall of Fame Beverages, Inc. is planning to launch a full marketing campaign and strategic alliance with a large east coast distributor that will cover multiple cities and states on the East coast.

By continuing to branch outward into additional markets, offering the same levels of quality that our clients are already accustomed to, we foresee continued growth in multiple states.

Calvin Ross - Chief Financial Officer

Calvin Ross has been a successful entrepreneur, beverage industry executive and expert, and founder and CEO of two separate beverage companies. He has been profiled in trade publications like BevNet for his innovative approach and novel marketing techniques. From the summers of his youth spent running a Kool-Aid stand, his fascination with the beverage industry has clung to him. It was during his years as an amateur boxer that Mr. Ross was inspired to create and develop a beverage that would offer the restorative virtue that would provide a competitive advantage for athletes. After consultation with herbalists and nutritionists, Calvin Ross brought his own insights and marketing savvy to the table, and he created and developed an energy drink which he named Pit Bull. Relying on the lessons learned from this experience, Mr. Ross launched the Hip Hop Beverage Corporation in 2000, targeting an urban youth demographic that was at that time largely overlooked. By 2003, he was seeking new challenges, and he left the company to launch Raw Dawg Beverages. As President and founder of Raw Dawg Beverages, the producer of Raw Dawg Sports Energy Drink, Mr. Ross was responsible for developing the company's signature brand and look, and expanding the distribution to become an approved supplier to Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. Attuned to the currents of the industry, and exceptionally well-versed in negotiating the complex market, Calvin Ross possesses the insight and experience that is invaluable to the success of Hall of Fame Beverage, Inc.
