FORWARD LOOKING STATEMENTS

This Disclosure Statement contains or may contain forward looking statements and information that are based upon beliefs of, and information currently available to, the company management, as well as estimates and assumptions made by such management. When used herein, the words 'anticipate', 'believe', 'expect', 'future', 'intend', 'plan', and similar expressions as they relate to the company, or the company management identify forward looking statements. Such statements reflect the current view of the company with respect to future events and are subject to risks, uncertainties, and assumptions relating to the company operations and results of operations and any businesses that may be acquired by the company

Should one or more of these risks or uncertainties materialize, or should the underlying assumptions prove incorrect, actual results may differ significantly from those anticipated, believed, estimated, intended or planned. Some of the factors, which may cause such a difference, are set out under 'Risk Factors' below.

RISK FACTORS

Investing in the Common Shares of the company involves a significant degree of risk to capital. There can be no assurance that the company will be successful in implementing its business plan and an investment in the company may result in investors losing some or all of their money.

In addition to the other information in this Memorandum, the following risk factors should be considered carefully in evaluating the company and its business before purchasing Common Shares.

Foreign-Exchange Fluctuation

Some of the operations of the portfolio companies may be denominated in currencies other than the US Dollar and therefore the assets of the portfolio companies will also be subject to fluctuations in foreign currency exchange rates.

Suspension of Trading

Under certain trading conditions, it may be difficult or impossible for the company and/or portfolio companies to liquidate a position. This may occur for example at times of rapid price movements and when trading is suspended by a relevant Exchange. In these circumstances, it may be impossible for the company and/or portfolio companies to liquidate or limit a loss by placing a stop-loss order.

Insolvency

Default or insolvency of a broker may result in positions being liquidated or closed out.

Volatile Markets

Price movements in the capital markets can be volatile and are influenced by, among other things, national and international political and economic events, changes, in exchange and interest rates, Governmental fiscal policies.

Market Risks

The profitability of a significant portion of the company's growth strategy depends to a great extent upon correctly assessing the future course of the price movements of the securities of portfolio companies. The success or failure of the company will depend upon the ability of the management to trade profitably. There can be no assurance that the company or any sub-contracted Trading Advisors will be able to predict accurately these price movements. Past performance does not guarantee future results.

Additional Capital

The further development and execution of the company business plan may require substantial additional financing. Failure to obtain sufficient financing may result in delaying or indefinite postponement of any or all of the company deals in place or even a loss of a deal or potential portfolio company. There can be no assurance that additional capital or other types of financing will be available if needed or that, if available, the terms of such financing will be favorable to the company.

The company has sufficient resources for its immediate business strategy. The company is in need of cash resources to implement its long-term business strategy, which focuses on advancing the deals currently under the company control. Near term goals include: financing its current clientele with valuations in excess of $100,000,000. However, expanding and taking on new clients and portfolio companies undertaken by the company could require additional capital. The Directors of the company believe that the income forthcoming from its current deals in place during its first two full operational years will be adequate to satisfy the capital and operating requirements of the company during the immediate future.

Any decrease in the company growth rate, shortfalls in anticipated revenues, increases in anticipated expenses, or significant acquisition opportunities could have a material adverse effect on the company liquidity and capital resources and could require the company to raise additional capital from public or private equity or debt sources. There can be no assurance that the company will be able to raise any such capital on terms acceptable to the company or at all.

Unforeseen Costs

Should any unforeseen issues occur, the company might not obtain adequate cash flow from its operations as anticipated. The company may be unable to raise any additional capital on desirable or acceptable terms. If further financing cannot be sourced in adequate amounts or secured on satisfactory terms, then the company may be unable to pursue new projects or to continue operations at desired levels.

Fluctuations in Quarterly Operating Results

The company may experience variations in its income on a quarterly basis because of many factors, including seasonal factors affecting costs and delays in income. If revenues do not meet expectations in any given quarter and the company is unable to adjust spending in a timely manner, operating results could be affected materially.

Shortage of Working Capital

It is possible that the company will have a shortage of working capital if it is unable to derive revenue from its clients and portfolio companies or from raising funds from outside sources. Should this not be sufficient, the company may be required to borrow money as may be necessary for its business operations.

Market for the Common Shares

There is no existing market for the Common Shares and no assurances can be given that a market will develop for the Common Shares or if such markets develop that they will continue. Accordingly, investors may be unable to realize their investment in the Common Shares.

Market Price of Common Shares

Securities of mid-cap and small-cap companies have experienced substantial volatility in the past, often based on factors unrelated to the financial performance or prospects of the companies involved. These factors include macroeconomic developments in North America and globally and market perceptions of the attractiveness of particular industries. Other factors unrelated to the company performance that may have an effect on the price of the Common Shares include the following: the extent of analytical coverage available to investors concerning the company business may be limited if investment banks with research capabilities do not continue to follow the company; lessening in trading volume and general market interest in the company's securities may affect an investor's ability to trade significant numbers of Common Shares; the size of the company's public float may limit the ability of some institutions to invest in the company's securities; and a substantial decline in the price of the Common Shares that persists for a significant period of time could cause the company's securities to be delisted from the exchange on which they trade, further reducing market liquidity.

As a result of any of these factors, the market price of the Common Shares at any given point in time may not accurately reflect the company long-term value. Securities class action litigation often has been brought against companies following periods of volatility in the market price of their securities. The company may in the future be the target of similar litigation. Securities litigation could result in substantial costs and damages and divert management's attention and resources.

Future Sales of Common Shares by Existing Shareholders

Sales of a large number of Common Shares in the public markets, or the potential for such sales, could decrease the trading price of the Common Shares and could impair the company's ability to raise capital through future sales of Common Shares.

Dependence on Key Personnel

The company's success depends upon the continued efforts of its senior management team and its technical personnel. Such employees may voluntarily terminate their employment with the company at any time. The company's success also depends on its ability to attract and retain additional highly qualified management and technical personnel. The process of hiring employees with the combination of skills and attributes required to carry out the company's strategy can be extremely time-consuming. There can be no assurance that the company will be able to retain or integrate existing personnel or identify and hire additional personnel. The loss of the services of key personnel, or the inability to attract additional qualified personnel, could materially affect the company's business, financial condition, and results of operations.

Significant Control

The largest shareholder of the company is Richard Angelo Di'Biase. As a result, collectively, he will have the ability to influence the company and the direction of its affairs and business.

Political Risks

The company current operations are comprised of a multitude of deals, which will be based all around the world, and as such, the company operations are exposed to various levels of political, economic and other risks and uncertainties. These risks and uncertainties vary from country to country and include, but are not limited to, currency exchange rates; high rates of inflation; labor unrest; renegotiation or nullification of existing concessions, licenses, permits and contracts; changes in taxation policies; restrictions on foreign exchange; and changing political conditions; currency controls and governmental regulations that favor or require the awarding of contracts to local contractors or require foreign contractors to employ citizens of, or purchase supplies from, a particular jurisdiction.

Future political actions cannot be predicted and may adversely affect the company changes, if any, in investment policies or shifts in political attitude in the countries of the company clients and portfolio companies may adversely affect the company's business, results of operations and financial condition. Future operations may be affected in varying degrees by government regulations with respect to, but not limited to, restrictions on production, price controls, export controls, currency remittance, income taxes, foreign investment, maintenance of claims, environmental legislation, land use, land claims of local people, water use and mine safety. The possibility that future governments may adopt substantially different policies, which may extend to the expropriation of assets, cannot be ruled out.

The occurrence of these various factors and uncertainties cannot be accurately predicted and could have an adverse effect on the company's consolidated business, results of operations and financial condition.

Officers and Directors:

Richard Angelo Di'Biase:

Richard has over 15 years of experience in financial markets. He has successfully managed a nine-figure diversified portfolio while conducting thorough company research and advanced analytics. Richard currently manages an extensive global network of marketing specialists, brokers, and market makers which gives WorldCap the ability to trade stocks for company's listed on a vast array of internationally recognized stock exchanges. He has a strong track record of identifying a number of start-ups that have yielded significant returns. One of which was an import and export company where he led the division that oversaw the issuance of credit facilities and bank letters of credit with valuations in excess of over $75 million to $100 million. He also oversaw the purchase and distribution of over $250 million in product sales by the third year in business. While under the leadership of Mr. Di'Biase, the company had growth of 100% - 250% annually in product sales and revenues. During his tenure there, he learned how to structure the financing of very large international deals and that is where he realized the real revenue potential of being on the financing end of transactions. As a past consultant to many CEO's of publicly traded technology companies, he gained a unique perception for analyzing information. This has allowed him to prepare plans best suited to individual clients' requirements; as well as, providing clients with information on new and existing products and services. By communicating complex information to clients, directly and efficiently, he has been able to bridge the gap of knowledge for his clients to maximize their options. In addition, he has helped them to assess the relative merits of different plans.
