5) Issuer's Business, Products and Services

The purpose of this section is to provide a clear description of the issuer's current operations. In answering this item, please include the following:

A. Summarize the issuer's business operations (If the issuer does not have current operations, state "no operations")

Real Brands, through its merger with CASH, acquired a facility at 12 Humbert St. in North Providence Rhode Island. The Company spent 2020 renovating the building and turning it into a state-of-the-art hemp processing facility. The facility is equipped with our proprietary Halo 5 processing technology system (encompassing chemistry, mechanical engineering, and computer software) that produces a consistent 99.9% pure CBD distillate and isolate at less than $200 Liter/Kilogram. We have just finished building a high-volume, low-cost ingredient supply chain of consistent CBD distillate and isolate and believe that our proprietary technology system will allow us to be best positioned to protect gross margins in our wholesale ingredient supply business when more traditional commoditized pricing takes shape in the market over time.

Describe any subsidiaries, parents, or affiliated companies, if applicable, and a description of their business contact information for the business, officers, directors, managers or control persons. Subsidiary information may be included by reference

The Company has a wholly owned subsidiary named CASH Acquisition Corp. CASH Acquisition Corp has a wholly owned subsidiary named American Standard Hemp Inc. The hemp license is in the name of American Standard Hemp Inc. The Companies share officers and directors and all of the operations are conducted under Real Brands Inc.

B. Describe the issuers' principal products or services, and their markets

The Company specializes in hemp CBD oil/isolate extraction, wholesaling of CBD oils and isolate, manufacturing, production and sales of hemp-derived CBD consumer, celebrity brands, and white label products. The Company has also made a strategic commitment to becoming a brand owner and has committed resources to develop two proprietary branded product lines and is exploring other brands and brand related relationships. The Company has also committed resources to be properly positioned to create novel formulations for packaged products for retail as needed for its branded products, and to support its ingredient supply chain customers such as Turning Point Brands, Inc. The Company is also positioned to manufacture packaged products for retail but expects to enter into co-packing relationships as volume grows in order to distribute high-quality, low-cost hemp products such as tinctures (liquids), capsules, topical products, vape cartridges, oral sprays and other products that contain CBD distillate or isolate.

Other than the Company's significant focus on building a high-volume, low-cost ingredient supply chain of consistent CBD distillate and isolate, its primary focus will be the development of its branded business that today includes American Standard Hemp and WA Products. All other corporate initiatives are expected to be central to appropriate vertical integration and insulating and building the Company's focused business lines.

The Hemp Market

Mainstream acceptance of CBD is expected to continue its general upward trend despite the market challenges and adjustments created by the Covid-19 Pandemic. Based upon the Brightfield Group's publicly available market reports between 2018 and 2020, the Brightfield Group had estimated the US CBD market in 2020 was projected to reach $4.7 billion in sales, with 14% growth from 2019 sales of $4.1 billion. (Lower than pre-Covid levels of $7 billion for 2020.) Actual 2020 Sales were $4.6 billion. According to the researchers, the U.S. hemp-derived CBD market will reach $5.3 billion in retail sales in 2021. This would imply 15% growth over 2020 sales of $4.6 billion.

In addition, based upon the publicly available market reports from the Brightfield Group, they expect sales to reach $16 billion by 2026, driven by accelerated growth of ingestibles (tinctures, capsules, drinks). New consumers will enter the market as prices continue to drop and access expands and online sales will surpass $2 billion in 2021, accounting for 38% of the total American CBD market. This is down slightly from 42% in 2020, but it's a good sign that things might be returning to the beginning of normalcy as people return to in-person retail shopping.

The base of US CBD consumers is still growing strong and by 2026, the total US CBD market could still reach $16 billion based upon the publicly available Brightfield Group market reports. The CBD market still exists in a regulatory gray area nearly 2.5 years after the 2018 Farm Bill went into effect. The delay has been particularly impactful for ingestible CBD products like edibles and tinctures. The US Food and Drug Administration has yet to provide the framework needed to govern how CBD ingestibles can be sold legally. The lack of regulation has kept large consumer packaged goods companies from entering the market. Federal guidance is needed for these players to get involved without risking the rest of their business.

Key growth drivers for CBD will be natural health and wellness trends, product variety, expanded distribution channels, and a growing awareness of the benefits of CBD as a natural alternative to pharmaceuticals for cancer patients to athletes.

Americans have utilized hemp in their diets for health and other practical reasons seemingly forever, and hemp is a strong and highly versatile crop that has many good attributes including a host of scientifically confirmed medicinal properties. There is strong evidence that hemp, now legally grown in the US, will see a nearly unprecedented investment as hemp is believed to have an ability to grow the US economy via new jobs and commerce, while providing any number of valuable products including in the healthcare sector.

Hemp has long been known for its use in textiles, but has nutrients, proteins and essential fatty acids as well. The company is developing and focused on a wide variety of CBD products derived from hemp, as the market is experiencing growth from different categories including healthy drinks and medicine.

The beverage industry and the biotechnology industry have and continue to make huge investments including new companies and established companies alike. These sectors are just two of many examples, and the Company's management believes that CBD derived from hemp will ultimately become a staple in American life, and alleviate any number of health and wellness issues, and generally elevate the quality of life.

Hemp as a crop has some interesting redeeming qualities that farmers enjoy. Hemp is an extremely hardy crop, and requires less water than many other crops, and also rejuvenates the soil by adding back many critical nutrients that other crops do not. This can have a stabilizing effect, as sustainable plants often assist in developing sustainable businesses. The legal distinction from marijuana in the US is that hemp contains less than 0.3% of the cannabinoid chemical THC, which is creaturized as the most intoxicating, psychoactive component in the cannabis plant family.

Due to hemp's nutritional and medicinal qualities, the Company has decided to focus its effort on building a near vertically integrated business model. That is, it will seek to strategically partner with farmers. A main driver of the Company's business model is to exploit in the most positive way its proprietary processing technology and knowhow. Today the Company purchases hemp biomass on the open market, and then reduces it into a variety of unique cannabinoids, including CBD, CBG, CBN etc. Hemp is fast becoming a highly sought-after ingredient in food and drink, cosmetics and skincare, and healthcare and general nutrition centric products. Furthermore, as the 2018 Farm Bill will boost hemp genetics research, the Company expects that many plant geneticists with an interest in hemp will begin to focus their efforts due to the new and greatly improved legal framework in the U.S., and at least for the short-term it is very likely the large agriculture companies will take a wait and see attitude, at least until the majority, if not all of the states publish their regulations, and large consumer markets, and packaged goods companies' appetites begin to fit their large size. However, for growth companies, the Company believes there is ample opportunity as an early-mover to create CBD derived from hemp branded product lines in multiple categories.

On December 20, 2018 President Trump signed into law the 2018 Farm Bill (included in the Agricultural Improvement Act of 2018). Hemp is defined in the legislation as the cannabis plant with one key difference: hemp cannot contain more than 0.3 percent of delta-9-tetrahydrocannabinol ("THC"), the compound in the plant most commonly associated with getting a person high. In other words, hemp cannot get you high. For decades, federal law did not differentiate hemp from other cannabis plants, all of which were effectively made illegal in 1937 under the Marijuana Tax Act and formally made illegal in 1970 under the Controlled Substances Act ("CSA") which banned cannabis of any kind.

Pursuant to the 2018 Farm Bill, hemp products and their derivatives were removed as a prohibited substance under the CSA, subject to certain conditions, such as the percent amount of THC in the product, as well as an USDA-approved state regulatory program. On October 31, 2019 the USDA issued an interim final rule regarding the Establishment of a Domestic Hemp Production Program which authorized hemp to be grown and processed legally in the United States and made it legal to transport in interstate commerce. Although this interim final rule became effective on the date of publication, there is a possibility it will be modified from its current application.

Specifically, the Farm Bill defined hemp as cannabis and cannabis derivatives (e.g., CBD) with extremely low (no more than 0.3 percent on a dry weight basis) concentrations of the psychoactive compound THC, and removed those “hemp” products from the CSA. Subsequent to the enactment of the 2018 Farm Bill, many companies entered the market, and prominent national retailers began carrying CBD products in different formats, such as edibles, topicals, vapor products, tinctures, and pet foods.

The Farm Bill did not eliminate federal oversight of CBD products and in fact explicitly recognized certain federal agencies’ continued jurisdiction. In certain circumstances, hemp products remain subject to other regulatory bodies, such as the United States Food and Drug Administration (“FDA”), the United States Federal Trade Commission (“FTC”), state and local regulation, et al. For example, certain marketers of CBD products have received warning letters from FDA regarding particular health claims made in the promotion of those marketers’ products. Similarly, some states have banned or proposed to ban smokable hemp “cigarettes.”

FDA, moreover, has approved as a drug EPIDIOLEX for treatment of various seizures. EPIDIOLEX’s active ingredient is a particular CBD isolate. That approval, while showing that the safe and effective therapeutic benefits of CBD can be proven, may also prevent the over-the-counter sale of CBD products for the same purpose in the same formulation.

FDA, on April 2, 2019, announced that it was beginning to study if and how to regulate CBD products. It is unclear what, if anything, FDA will recommend, including whether to recommend a new regulatory group, or whether to regulate under its existing Centers, such as dietary supplements. Under dietary supplement regulation, manufacturers are required to register with FDA and comply with certain defined Good Manufacturing Practices, and refrain from medical claims. FDA has stated that it does not believe that CBD products would properly be regulated as a dietary supplement without further action; however, in its April 2 announcement FDA included a statement that products containing CBD might be regulated as dietary supplements. (Statement from FDA Commissioner Scott Gottlieb, M.D., on new steps to advance agency’s continued evaluation of potential regulatory pathways for cannabis-containing and cannabis-derived products | FDA. <https://www.fda.gov/news-events/press-announcements/statement-fda-commissioner-scott-gottlieb-md-new-steps-advance-agencys-continued-evaluation>.)

The Farm Bill explicitly allows the transfer of hemp-derived products across state lines for commercial or other purposes. It also puts no restrictions on the sale, transport, or possession of hemp-derived products, so long as those items are produced in a manner consistent with the law.

While the Farm Bill legalizes hemp, it does not create a system in which people can grow it as freely as they can grow carrots or parsley and this is still a highly regulated crop in the United States for both personal and industrial production.

Many experts predicted that the newly elected Biden/Harris administration would remove hemp and marijuana from the list of schedule 1 drugs shortly after taking office. While Biden supports marijuana decriminalization, efforts to legalize cannabis consumption are likely to continue at the state level for now even though both the House and the Senate are actively working on a Bill aimed at legalization. In 2021, employers will need to review their policies and ensure that they comply with evolving laws, particularly those covering medical marijuana patients. Once the regulatory uncertainty clears, the Company expects that major CPG brands waiting on the sidelines will begin to jump and mainstream retailers such as grocery stores, big box outlets, and warehouse clubs will carry a full slate of CBD products.

The pandemic has been a significant extinction event for hundreds of small brands in the US CBD market and we believe that Real Brands is well-positioned survivor and ready to benefit from an expanding market.

In summary, the regulatory landscape remains in flux and uncertain, but management believes that responsibly manufactured and marketed products are viable under current regulations and will continue to be as the regulatory structure evolves.

6) Issuer's Facilities

The goal of this section is to provide a potential investor with a clear understanding of all assets, properties or facilities owned, used or leased by the issuer.

In responding to this item, please clearly describe the assets, properties or facilities of the issuer, give the location of the principal plants and other property of the issuer and describe the condition of the properties. If the issuer does not have complete ownership or control of the property (for example, if others also own the property or if there is a mortgage on the property), describe the limitations on the ownership.

If the issuer leases any assets, properties or facilities, clearly describe them as above and the terms of their leases.

As a result of the Merger, we acquired property located at 12 Humbert Street, North Providence, Rhode Island, which property had been purchased on February 15, 2020 by the predecessor to CASH Inc. The property consists of approximately 6,000 square feet and is used to manufacture our CBD products. The property was renovated as necessary in order to be fully licensed by the State of Rhode Island to produce CBD products and the Company believes that it is adequate for our current needs and our reasonably expected future needs over the next twelve months.

Presently, our executive offices are located in our president's residence at 11 Royal Road, Brookline, Massachusetts 02445, where we occupy approximately 800 square feet. This space is adequate for our present and our planned future operations. We currently pay no rent to our president for use of this space, although when funds are available, we may do so in the future. In addition, we have no written agreement or formal arrangement with our president pertaining to the use of this space. Another entity also operates from this office.

7) Officers, Directors, and Control Persons
