
Over 65 Australian companies have elected to cross-trade in the US on the OTCQX or OTCQB Markets. These companies, which represent a range of industries, note the growing importance of providing US investors with seamless access to trade their shares. Amidst the current economic environment and changing regulatory requirements for international companies in the US, selecting an efficient, regulated US market can enable public companies to diversify their shareholder base and lower complexity of their global investor relations program.

We're a German company, but the US is extremely important for us. And just like it's important for us when it comes to the business, the US is also very important for us when it comes to our investor base. OTCQX facilitates our outreach to US investors, as it allows investors a very easy and simple way to invest into the adidas equity story.
