At least eighty eight species of fungi attack cannabis plants and more are being discovered every year. Viruses can seriously reduce yields. Once acquired, they are nearly impossible to eradicate. Viruses invade all parts of plants. Pollen and seed infections transmit viruses to subsequent generations. Bacteria's are also common among marijuana plants, with most forms showing up as "blight" diseases. This will cause spots to show up on the leaves, followed by a wilting, rotting and decaying of the marijuana plants or even the harvested material.

Cannabis Clean and Grow Clean products are the first line of defense for cultivators in protecting marijuana plants against harmful mold, mildew and bacteria growth. Both brand name products contain a two-step application system:

Step One - powerful CLO2 cleaner that destroy bacterial growth.

Step Two - shield of protection that works against the development of bacteria growth.
