

Protek Capital, Inc. Shareholders updates Q1.

Company in Negotiations to Acquire Legal Clicks dot Com and Superstar Management Group, Inc.

Dallas, TX--(MARKET WIRE)—January 24, 2013 Protek Capital, Inc. (OTCPK: PRPM) is pleased to announce Shareholders updates and recent developments for January, Q1 2013.

ProTek Capital Inc., is please to release a recent CEO radio interview. In order to maintain information flow and updates. ProTek Capital Inc., is committed to have at least one update per months for its shareholders base.

“As the company emerges after the holidays and is preparing its fiscal year end filings for January 31st, 2012. I was interviewed by The Stock Radio.com. As a media person, I feel that using multiple genres to relay the company’s message would be useful. It seems more personal and the overall goal is also to introduce myself to the shareholders as well as let them hear the words and the plan that we are rolling out. When the company is rolling out its plans and goals, it’s very easy to forget how slow things may look to the outsiders, who are not involved with the day to day ups and downs of creating a company, running the business and face many challenges that a new venture faces. That is why; I make it easier for the shareholders to contact me and the company directly, in order to get a first hand response to whatever their concerns may be”. Stated Edward Vakser CEO of ProTek Capital Inc.

The management for ProTek Capital Inc., filed to re domicile the company to Wyoming. Therefore saving on tremendous expenses of fees and filings with the current Nevada state. As part preparation for the 2013 season and restructuring of ProTek, the company will open a New Software Development and Marketing office in Nashville. This is in anticipation of closing the Legal Clicks dot Com deal. In addition, ProTek will also have presence at current sister companies locations in Dallas Texas, New York and Florida.

The company is in the final stages of negotiating a funding agreement that will facilitate a completion of several acquisitions.

“We are very picky as to what kind of a deal we will entertain. My group is used to fund our own deals, as we have here with ProTek. However, as we proceed with high end acquisitions, we will seek help with funding groups that we know and trust. We are working with a very reputable group, that will help us achieve these ambitious goals without the typical “toxic” or Death Spiral financings that is usually associated with Microcap companies and acquisitions. This will allow us to focus on fundamentals such as revenues, product development, earnings per share and EBITDA that will get ProTek a multiple that is indicative to a high tech and software development company. This will be combined with several already existing public companies that are in need of additional software and technology upgrades. These companies already agreed on the co-production deals, so the outlook for 2013 is starting to look very positive for ProTek Capital Inc., “stated Edward Vakser interim CEO of ProTek.

ProTek Capital Inc, has been recently acquired by a new investment group. The new investors implemented a new business plan that would be fulfilled by new management and a newly appointed board.

The recent developments in ProTek Capital Inc., has prompted this management to release a shareholders update and a recap of recent developments.

The management of ProTek will implement a monthly Shareholders Updates routine. “Along with the normal set of disclosures, significant events and Press Releases, the management will do a monthly Press Release to maintain an information and disclosure flow for our shareholders. We feel that the ProTek Capital in its past form has created a great following among the investment community and our management desires to honor and respect their loyalty to the company. We realized that as we took over and implemented the new business concepts and plans, the investors may speculate and have the wrong ideas about our intent and plans. So, as the interim CEO and a board representative, I wanted to assure that there are certain corporate actions that will not take place. For example, the current interim management as well as the newly assigned board of directors are not contemplating nor consider implementing and reverse stock split. However, we are implementing an aggressive “buy back” program due to the fact that in our current management opinion, ProTek stock is extremely underpriced and undervalued. Nor are we considering any sort of “toxic” and/or convertible debenture financing. We feel that since we are self funding group, we can grow and prosper with the current loyal and supportive shareholders.” Stated Edward Vakser, Chairman/CEO of ProTek Capital Inc.

To further recap of the company’s current actions:
